PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

When preparing a message for January, it is natural that one's thoughts would turn to New Year's resolutions. I usually make a list of the things I plan to do and, although I don't always accomplish them all, the process of reviewing the past year's work to find areas where improvement is needed, seems beneficial within itself.

As usual, some of my resolutions will involve the TNA, and I hope that yours do too! If you haven't yet resolved to make a greater contribution to numismatics in 1978 by doing such things as inviting more of your friends and acquaintances to join your local coin club and TNA, writing that article for our TNA NEWS, preparing a numismatic exhibit for display on special days in your home town or at coin shows you plan to attend, or just offering to present the program at your local coin club; think about it and resolve to do it! The more we give and share with others, the more enjoyment and satisfaction we are sure to get from our collecting hobby.

A few days ago, a Paris man, John T. Hamman, visited me to show me an 1804 U.S. dollar which he had acquired. He stated that he could not give me the history of the coin, but that it was a new discovery.

The coin had not been authenticated, but nevertheless, I got a thrill out of handling it. I suggested several places where he could take the coin to be examined, so by this time, if it is authentic, you will undoubtedly have read about it in other coin publications.

Best wishes for a happy 1978. We can't all discover an 1804 dollar, but I do hope that you manage to get a coin (or whatever you collect) in 1978 that will give you just as big a thrill!

Transition From Republic To Empire

The first century B.C. was one of great readjustment for Rome. The traditional bases of power in the Roman government were shifting from the Senate and elected Consuls to military field commanders. This displacement of power was caused chiefly by Rome's growth from a city-state to a world power. Much of the new land conquered by Rome was under control of the Roman officers. Although the central government in Rome and Italy were in power in the older provinces, the military was flexing its muscle in the newly won lands. The coinage system just as the government was in a state of transformation and confusion.

The coins of the Roman Republic were controlled completely by the Senate. The Senate would authorize private moneyers to execute the coins for the State. Most of the coins of the Republic and even into the early Empire had some allegorical figure on the obverse and numerous varieties on the reverse with the moneyer's name abbreviated. This system started to break down in the early first century B.C. A new series of coins were begun by military commanders in the field. This development of issuing coins outside of Rome had its roots earlier in the Roman Republic under the title of Imperator which was conferred on many generals by the Senate. The military commanders during times of war and crisis had the power to issue coins, with special Senate approval, to cover soldiers' pay, supplies and other costs. The leaders of the Roman army started to abuse this privilege by issuing coins under their own authority without consulting the Senate. In effect, setting themselves as a power outside the Senate.

During the civil wars, Pompey and Julius Caesar began striking their own coins. These coins circulated principally in the provinces controlled by them. The Senate still struck in Rome and Italy. After Caesar took complete power he began to use gold and silver coins from Rome completely ignoring the Senate who had fled to Greece during the civil wars. In 44 B.C., with the Senate back in Rome under his domination, Caesar received permission from the Senate to use his portrait on the obverse of his coins. This was the first time in Roman history that a living person was portrayed on a coin. This event set a precedent that would change the character of Roman coins for the next several centuries.

After Caesar's assassination a triumvirate was formed composed of Mark Anthony, Lepidus and Octavian, later known as Augustus, which divided between themselves the land Caesar had controlled. The three assumed the right of portraiture that Caesar had received. Even the assassins of Caesar, Brutus and Cassius, issued coins with their portraits. This situation was ironic since the reason they killed Caesar was to restore the Republic and the depiction of living persons on coins was such an un-Republicon act.

The triumvirate lasted until 31 B.C. when civil war broke out again. This time between Octavian and Mark Anthony. Octavian defeated Mark Anthony and Cleopatra at the battle of Actium. Octavian was now master of the Roman world. From 31-27 B.C., Augustus, as he was now known, issued gold and silver coins from the East using his power of a Imperator as his authority. By 23 B.C. Augustus had the gold and silver coinage under his complete control and the Senate had only the brass token money under its jurisdiction. All bronze coins in Italy had S.C. stamped on them which stood for "SENATUS CON-SULTO," by consent of the Senate.

This system prevailed into the early Empire except in one small period from 19-12 B.C. in which the Senate again struck gold and silver coins. But this did not last long and so the Senatorial coinage of precious metals faded into history.

In 15 B.C., Augustus opened his new imperial mint in Lugdunum, now France. From this mint he supplied the whole empire with gold coinage and all the West with silver. By having a mint in a province which he controlled, Augustus did not technically violate the Senate's authority to issue coins from Rome.

Augustus also made major reforms of the coinage system. He introduced a circulating gold coin, standardized the fineness of the silver coins, and changed the relationship of the denominations. Below is a list of the denominations, the metal it is minted in, and their relationship between them.

| METAL        | DENOMINATION | VALUE               |

PILGRIM TERCENTENARY

The city of Plymouth, Mass. celebrated the 300th anniversary, in 1920, of the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock. A silver half dollar was issued to commemorate the event. The coin was distributed by the Pilgrim Tercentenary Commission through Shawmut National Bank of Boston.

On Sept. 16, 1620, 102 Pilgrims set sail on the ship "Mayflower" from England bound for the American colony of Virginia. As they neared the American coast, strong winds blew the ship northward and they landed on Plymouth Rock on Nov. 9, 1620.

The Pilgrims, a religious group who separated from the Church of England, wanted religious freedom. They wanted no religious "trimmings" and their belief was solely in the Bible.

The first winter the Pilgrims were in America was a busy one. They made preparations for the winter, explored the land and finally settled at Plymouth, Mass. on Dec. 16.

After many hardships and a plague wiping out nearly half the Pilgrims, the new colony began to prosper. Supplies began coming in and their new-found friends - the Indians - had taught them how to plant and harvest corn. Their more influential leaders were William Brewster and William Bradford.

The obverse on the coin shows William Bradford, wearing hat, and carrying a Bible under his arm.

The reverse features a male figure on the ship "Mayflower." Cyrus E. Dallin was designer. The coins were minted in 1920 and 1921 and sold for $1.00.

COMMENTARIUM.....

Lyman C. Bartee

Austin, Tx.

To quote "Service to others is the rent we pay while we are here on earth."

To paraphrase: "Service to TNA is the rent we pay for election or appointment to office."

How many of us are delinquent in our rent payments? The landlord evicts the tenant that does not pay rent as agreed. TNA by-laws provide a procedure for the same. Just a reminder.

Having traveled 4500 miles in 1977 attending numismatic meetings as a participant in each of them, I have talked with TNA members from all parts of Texas and many from other states. Too many times the question is asked - Why can't I get an immediate reply to a letter? Why does ..... not do this or that? Will you look

VW(ing) His Coins!

Volkswagen dealer Elvin Silverman of Independence, Mo. hasn't many takers on his offer to sell cars normally priced at $4,119 for $1,373.

No wonder.

The catch is that they must be paid for in dimes, quarters or half dollars minted before 1965!

into that for me? Frequently an answer can be given immediately but I do try to get the information to them.

We are starting a new year, a very significant year for TNA. The numismatic community of the world will be coming to Texas in August. Will we be in a position to point with pride, to our visitors, and say "I am an officer in TNA. We are doing this and have accomplished that, we are growing and serving the needs of all numismatists in Texas."

As the new year begins, let each officer, both elective and appointive, ask the personal question, 'Am I paying my rent?' If yes, a job well done. If not, pay up before it's too late.

Have a happy and productive new year!

COVERED WAGON

The Voortrekker ox wagon featured on the 1961 64 cent of South Africa exemplifies the sprightly covered wagon, one of the most wily distributed - and uncomfortable - conveyances in the history of land transportation. The only concession to comfort was the canvas or cotton cover which imperfectly shielded the emigrant and his possessions from rain and dust while he resolutely followed vague trails of parallel wagon ruts.

Lightness, strength and simplicity placed the ox drawn covered wagon in the forefront of the land vehicles utilized in the great migratory movements of history, including America's march to the western sea. No other vehicle of its time offered a better hope of delivering the emigrant to his destination safely and in comfort.

No other could say "I am safe" so forcibly, decrying all risks on its a-topical coin collection due to transportation difficulties. World Coin Calendar. Krause Publications, 1976.

Automobile Dollar

American ingenuity put the world on wheels and commerce on all-weather roads, but it was China, one of the nations affected by the revolution in transportation wrought by Henry Ford, that gave numismatics its only car coin.

O. J. Todd, an American civil engineer who spent 21 years in China, designed a macadamized road that ran through Kweiyang, the capitol city of the province of Kweichow. The road was built in 1927 by the governor of the province, Chou Chi tsun.

In 1928, Chou Chi-tsun issued a silver, dollar-size coin bearing the representation of a sedan to commemorate the completion of the first road in Kweichow. — World Coin Calendar, Krause Publications 1976.

SECRET SERVICE ESTABLISHED

During the War Between the States it was estimated that one third of the currency in circulation was counterfeit.

At that time, there were approximately 1,600 state banks designing and printing their own bills. Each bill carried a different design, making it to detect one of the 1,000 varieties of counterfeit bills from the 7,000 varieties of genuine bills.

It was hoped the adoption of a national currency in 1863 would resolve the counterfeiting problem. However, the national currency was soon counterfeited and circulated so extensively, it became necessary to take enforcement measures. Therefore, on July 5, 1865, the United States Secret Service was established to suppress the widespread counterfeiting of the nation's currency.

Although the counterfeiting money was substantially suppressed after the establishment of the Secret Service, this crime represents a potential danger to the nation's economy.

Today, counterfeiting once again is on the rise. One reason for this is the ease and speed with which large quantities of counterfeit currency can be produced using modern photographic and printing equipment.

Until the 1730's most of the coinage struck by the mints of New Spain was of the "cob" type. The term cob originated from the phrase "cabo de barra" or end of a bar. These coins were crudely produced. Silver received at the mint was cast into small bars. The bars were then cut into pieces of about the same weight, hammered into blanks, heated and struck. Cob are known for their irregular shape and rough designs.
